The Hongkong Telegraph

HONGKONG, FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 10, 1899.

The outbreak of rinderpest at the Pokfulam sanitary board, and the need for vigilance to prevent the admission into the Colony of beasts or products from infected districts is so very apparent as to be beyond the need of demonstration.

The great need seems to be for the application of some efficient preventative to render animals impervious to disease, we shall look forward therefore with the greatest interest to the further development of the suggestions made at the meeting of the Sanitary Board yesterday, that some steps be taken to enable Mr. Ladds, the Colonial Veterinary Surgeon to fight the disease on its appearance, in the Colony.

If he can obtain the necessary serum for the inoculation of the beasts who are suffering, we may safely assume that inoculation by serum, which can perfect a cure, will be effective to prevent beasts, that have been previously treated, from catching the infection.

It was reported that Mr. Ladds had already achieved some success by inoculating affected animals with serum of his own preparation, but the lack of necessary appliances and conveniences prevented his keeping any of the preparation by him for future use.

In an important matter like this where the food supply of the Colony is affected, and affected very seriously it would be thought that Government would take some steps, and supply a public servant with those appliances and necessities the possession of which might have prevented much of the seriousness of the present outbreak.

Rinderpest is too serious a scourge for any half measures, prompted either by financial scarcity or economy.

It is the Hon. F. H. MAY imagines, rinderpest is so prevalent in the new territory, it is about time that an expert paid a visit to the territory with a view to ascertaining the extent of its ravages and the best method for its absolute exclusion from the Colony.

Our dairy farmers have suffered too much already; and their losses, with such a scarcity in the milk supply as we have here at the present time, as well as the preservation of the general health, demands that the greatest care be taken not to admit fodder &c., to this side from affected parts.

SANITARY BOARD.

At the meeting of the Sanitary Board yesterday afternoon a report by the Sanitary Inspector on the latrine and animal accommodation of the City of Victoria and its connection with the fouling of storm-water drains was submitted, by the Secretary.

Hon. R. D. Ormsby—begged to move that this report be forwarded to the Government for consideration and that the Government be asked to call upon the Public Works Department for a design and estimate for an underground latrine, in a suitable locality and to provide the funds for its construction next year. He was not sure, he said, that it would be possible to do this but Mr. Drury took great interest in this matter and he thought he would be very anxious to make such a thing a success, and if it was successful it would save them a good deal of trouble in regard to sites for latrines and should prove a great convenience to the public.

Dr. Clarke, in seconding, remarked that he did not think that the Board were in a position to adopt the report in toto, but the report referred to one point, which the Board had been urging upon the Public Works Department for years, the lamentable deficiency of latrine accommodation in the City and here they were at the end of another year and no latrines had been built, with the exception of one in Ship Street, and that only replaced a previous erection.

The report would serve to accelerate the fact that latrines were badly wanted. Mr. Drury had gone into the matter very fully and he thought they should forward the report without mutilation in any way and urge upon the Government the immediate necessity of latrine accommodation in the City of Victoria.

The motion was then put and agreed to.

Mr. Osborne—thought the thanks of the Sanitary Board were due to Mr. Drury for the able manner in which he had drawn up his report, and the thoroughness with which he had gone into the question and whilst agreeing to the proposal he should be glad if it could be arranged in some way so that the matter could be brought up again. It was only due to Mr. Drury that more than a passing notice should be taken of his report, and he thought that as many of his suggestions as possible should be carried out. They could not deal with the question of the removal of night soil now because he understood they had only lately renewed the contract for another three years, but he thought it would be a good thing if a Committee, consisting of the Medical Officer of Health, the Director of Public Works and the Vice-President would go carefully into the report and tell them what parts of the report could be adopted and what steps could be taken when the present contract was finished, because there was a danger that when the time came for the renewal of the contract and reviewing the situation Mr. Drury's report might be forgotten. He hoped the Director of Public Work would add this to his proposition.

The Vice-President said, he would have much pleasure in seconding the motion for the appointment of the Committee if Mr. Osborne's name were substituted for his.

This was done and the resolution was agreed to.

Mr. Osborne then moved that the thanks of the Board be presented to Mr. Drury for the valuable services he had rendered.

The Hon. F. H. May—seconded the motion, he said that had not Mr. Osborne moved this resolution he would have done so himself.

The resolution was agreed to.

Mr. Ormsby said that this resolution was necessary by the fact that the site previously selected adjoining Pound Lane was objected to, and the objection upheld by the Government, so that another site had to be selected and this was the position the Medical Officer of Health and himself had selected as most suitable.

Dr. Clarke, in seconding, said that this position was not nearly as suitable as the former but it certainly was a suitable site.

The motion was carried.

The Report of the Visiting Sub-Committee was then submitted.

THE CREMATION OF HINDOOS.

Dr. Clarke said he thought this was only a small matter. He had raised it as there were some complaints being made which had been brought to his notice. He thought that if the matter were referred to the Director of Public Works some better arrangements could be made. It was a question whether the site was the most suitable and he thought it was a matter to be submitted to the Government.

He moved that the matter be referred to the Government.

The Hon. F. H. May seconded.

The motion was carried.

APPOINTMENT OF AN ASSISTANT HEALTH OFFICER.

The President moved that the abstract of duties be forwarded to the Government as drawn up.

Mr. Osborne seconded.

The Hon. F. H. May thought that the growth of the Colony and constant recurrence of epidemics and the important legislation that was constantly taking place in sanitary matters had increased the work of the Sanitary Officers so greatly that one man could not possibly perform the work now and the Government's attention should be drawn to this fact.

The President—In forwarding the abstract attention will be drawn to this.

EXEMPTION FROM LINENWASHING.

Mr. Shelton's application for exemption from linenwashing certain houses was then considered.

The Hon. R. D. Ormsby moved that the application be refused, he did not consider that the fact of a house's cleanliness should exempt it from the application of the Board's Bye-laws but that when the time arrived for that work to be done there should be no exceptions made. The Land Investment Company would not be very much worse off for the outlay. He certainly did not see any reason for exemption.

Mr. Osborne seconded.

THE WAR.
LATEST BY WIRE.

The Retreat to Ladysmith.

A telegram from Sir George White, dated Ladysmith last evening, states that he moved out in strong force to cover Brigadier-General Buller's movement on Ladysmith. The British then occupied a strong ridge parallel with the enemy. General Buller confined his efforts to preventing the enemy from attacking General Buller. Numbers of the enemy have taken to flight.

General Symons.

The doctors have succeeded in extracting the bullet from General Symons. Lieut. Campbell, of the Gordon Highlanders, has died of his wounds.

Elands-laagte.

General Sir George White telegraphs this afternoon that his advance guard has come in touch with Brigadier-General Buller's force, which was halted at Sunday's River, five miles north of Elands-laagte, on the Ladysmith-Glencoe chain road. Sir George White has occupied all the strong positions along the road to Ladysmith, regarding which no anxiety need be felt. Sir George White's losses at Reinfenstein yesterday were 13 killed including Colonel Willford, of the Gloucesters; and the wounded Lieut. Douglas, of the 42nd Battery; Major Abdy, of 33rd Battery; Lieut. Perrean, of the 53rd Battery; Lieut. Stobart, of the 34th Battery; Lieut. Holford, of the 19th Hussars; and Lieut. Hickie, of the Gloucesters.

Action at Elands-laagte.

The Times special correspondent at Elands-laagte, describing the battle, says that, after our first battery came into action, a party of mounted Boers broke into retreat. This was a ruse by which it was hoped to draw off a part of the attacking force, they themselves galloping back into position on the reverse side of the hill. The enemy's guns then ceased firing, while our artillery, now having two batteries in action, prepared the way for the infantry assault, sending bursting shrapnel along the Boer position. Thunder-clouds behind the hills made an ominous background for the lurid light of the bursting shells. It was evident that the attack must be pressed home before the night; so, after half an hour's preparation, the infantry received orders to advance. The Devonshire Regiment were given the task of delivering the front attack, with the Manchester, supported by the Gordon Highlanders, on the right flank, for which they had to make a wide detour. This was at 4.30 p.m., and the rain fell in deluges a quarter of an hour later. As the infantry attack developed, the enemy brought forward 3 guns into position, and commenced shelling the advancing lines.

The Devons, who were steadily pushing across the open, cutting the impeding wire entanglements put up by the enemy, were extended as much as possible, the only method by which the men could hope to face the Mauser and Maxim fire. Nothing could be finer than the undaunted front this battalion displayed, while edging forward against the fire poured upon it from modern arms. The Gordons, skirting the batteries in action, cut in on the left of the Manchesters, and marched steadily in company column, until the boulder-strewn neck of the enemy's ridge was reached. This point was three-quarters of a mile from the Boer guns, in front of the Gordons; and from this position were three successive ridges running diagonally across the flat hill-top, each commanded by a strong force behind it. The hill itself was one mass of boulders. The regiment was many times driven back; yet righting themselves, the troops on the summit pushed on. The first ridge was already a shambles, but the weight of numbers carried the men on. It had ceased to be a "General's battle." Everything depended on the company, even the section commanders. Gallantly officers and non-commissioned officers did their work. If the men wavered, or stuck to cover, the officers sacrificed themselves for example. The enemy stood to their position with grim, magnificent persistence; and the last stand above their camp is one of the finest fighting records of modern times. Despite the united attack of the storming regiments, who trained their guns on the point-blank range, they checked the advance for half an hour. At six o'clock the bugles rang the advance. Fixed bayonets gleamed over the boulders through the fading light, and our men sprang up, to fall like rabbits. The bugle sounded again and again; and the Highlanders, shouting and cheering madly, dashed over the breastwork, while the skirling pipes sounded. Thus was the main hill-top taken, with "Majuba" on the lips of the men, who carried the banner with fixed bayonets.

A white handkerchief fluttered to show that the enemy had surrendered; but the main remnant pouring over the hillside were pounced upon by our cavalry, and the hillside was strewn with dead and wounded. The enemy's guns were fought splendidly. Their losses were heavy.

At De Aar.

The Times correspondent at De Aar wires that dissatisfaction in the Free States is on the increase. The Burghers feel that they have entered upon a hopeless struggle, since reports of the Glencoe and Elands-laagte engagements have not abroad; and Free State Commissaries are much inferior to that of the Transvaal. At Naauwpoort the Dutch freely state that President Steyn received fifty thousand pounds to induce his country to join the Transvaal.

Mafeking.

News from Mafeking on the 18th inst., by runner, states that Commandant Cronje had withdrawn a large proportion of his force. It was believed that heavy fighting elsewhere necessitated this, or that it was a Boer ruse. The investing Boers had 4,800 men and seven guns.

Captured Officers.

The War Office learns, unofficially, that Captain Lonsdale, Lieut. McMeurice, Lieut. Garvie, and Lieut. Grimshaw, of the Dublins; Lieut. Majendie, of the King's Rifles; Moeller (sic), and Major Greville and Captain Palko, of the 18th Hussars, have been all taken prisoners; and presumes that the whole squadron which they commanded in the pursuit of the enemy at Glencoe are prisoners also.

An M. P. Protests.

Mr. Michael Davitt, M. P. for S. Mayo, has resigned his seat in Parliament, as a protest against the injustice of the Government's policy. Mr. Davitt has been convicted of treason felony, and sentenced to 15 years' penal servitude. He is still only 55 years of age.

The Battle of Elands-laagte.

October 27th. The Times correspondent telegraphs that an examination of the field of the battle of Elands-laagte shows that our final flank attack was delivered over an approach which gave the fire of the enemy's guns an unimpeded sweep over six hundred yards of ground as open as a rifle range. The guns captured by the Devonshire Regiment proved to be identical with the 12-pounders taken by the Boers at Krugersdorp. Colonel Schiel, in conversation, said that nothing could stand against the accuracy of the fire of our field batteries, which repeatedly drove the Transvaal gunners from their embankments. The British infantry fire completely surprised the Boers, who had imagined that in their position they could easily master any infantry attack.

Fodder Prospects.

SIMLA, October 21st. A letter has reached Simla from the scientific correspondent in South Africa who says that the rains there last February and March, which was the wet season in that part of the world, were unusually heavy; and continued right through April, May, June, and July, which are usually dry months, the rainfall extending not only over Cape Colony, the Orange Free State and the Transvaal, but right into the Kalahari Desert on the north-west. This is altogether exceptional in South Africa, especially after the drought of the past few years there, and means an unusual amount of fodder throughout the whole of that region.

NOTES BY THE MAIL.

Krugers.

Mr. Kruger has declined to leave Pretoria, and declares that he will, "like a faithful captain, remain on the bridge whether his ship rides safely into harbour or goes down in the deep." The first obvious and visible sign that a state of war existed was the recall of Mr. Conyngham Greene, the British agent in Pretoria, and the closing of the Consulate General of the South African Republic in London.

At Mafeking.

When the mail left, chief interest centred at Mafeking where Col. Buller-Powell's force of 600 was threatened by some thousands of Boers. Every preparation was made on the night of October 18th to meet an attack by the Boers. No alarm, however, was raised. The prevailing excitement was increased by the news that the wires had been cut. It was ascertained later that they had really been broken by the lighting of an ammunition train, which, through an oversight, had not been lowered. Communication was restored. The strength of the Boer force under Commandant Cronje was estimated at 4,000. Dr. Hayes organized an ambulance service. Nearly all the ladies remaining volunteered to assist him. Machine guns were placed in position, and stacks of arms were provided near the native location, so that if the natives were attacked they might be able to defend themselves. A few persons refused to assist in the defence of the town, alleging that they were afraid of injuring their trade prospects in the Transvaal.

On October 12, a strong force moved out of the town towards the border, taking big guns and an ambulance equipment. The object of the movement of troops outside the town was to take up a strong defensive position, and Colonel Buller-Powell's forces were disposed so as to repel any attack. An armoured train, with 200 women and children, left the same day for the south. The telegraph line was subsequently cut by the Boers at Mafeking, forty miles south of Mafeking, and 2,000 Boers were known to be occupying the railway south of Vryburg.

The only news in London of the destruction of the armoured train was contained in a Reuter's message from Vryburg to London: "An armoured train has been destroyed. It is feared that there has been much loss of life. The news is officially confirmed."

With the Boers.

General Joubert allowed the Times special correspondent to pay a visit to the Boer forces near Sandfontein, but nothing noteworthy occurred. The strength of the Boers at this point of the frontier was about 8,000, scattered in various camps over wide areas. The General's headquarters and artillery camps were half a mile from Sandfontein station, and two miles from the border. In addition to the Boer commanders, Holland and Irish corps and an Irish corps were present, each about 450 strong, and two German corps, one of the latter under Colonel Schiel being at Klip River, near the Free State border. The frontier was being carefully patrolled, but by the General's special orders, no large bodies of armed burghers were allowed to show themselves near the frontier, and none at all were allowed to cross.

A trustworthy report at Ladysmith on the 11th ult. was that the same morning, 3,000 Boers were at Piggan, and in about a week afterwards marched down and occupied Liang's Nek.

Free State Proclamation.

President Steyn on the 11th October, issued a Proclamation to the Burghers of the Free State, in which he said that the Free State was about to be attacked by an unscrupulous enemy, who had long looked for a pretext to annihilate the Afrikaners. He went on to say that the people of the Orange Free State were bound to the Transvaal by many ties, as well as by formal Treaty, and solemnly declared, in the presence of the Almighty, that they were compelled to resist a powerful enemy owing to the injustice done to their kind and kin. "Solemn obligations," continued the Proclamation, "have not protected the Transvaal against an annexation conspiracy. When its independence ceases, the existence of the Orange Free State as an independent State will be meaningless." The President concluded with the following words: "Burghers of the Free State, stand up as one man against the oppressor and violator of right."

Those Mules!

Most of the mules at present in South Africa seem to have been imported from Italy. In the Southern Provinces of Italy the price of mules has risen to an unprecedented amount. Owners of mules took advantage of the extensive purchases on behalf of the British Government to make excellent bargains. In the provinces of Foggia, Bari, and Lecce, nearly every mule has been sold, at an average price of £20. The average price of a mule ordinarily is never 15s. (£6). Up to Oct. 11th, about 12,000 animals have been purchased by British agents.

Jameson's Men.

With very few exceptions, the men who took part in the Jameson Raid, and were subsequently taken to England have returned to South Africa and re-joined the various mounted police forces in Cape Colony and Natal. Several of the officers who accompanied Dr. Jameson are already in South Africa, and have joined one or other of the irregular contingents.

The Mounted Infantry.

On the 13th Oct., a force of mounted infantry, 2,800 strong, was sent for the C. C. This mounted force is divided into battalions and is drawn from infantry corps who have had men under training recently. The men of the 1st battalion are commanded by Lieut. Col. Press Opinions.

Writing on the Boer ultimatum, the Times says the fact that the Transvaal Government "have taken the infinitesimal step of despatching an ultimatum will be received with profound regret by the great majority of the British people." To the last we have clung to the hope that our differences with the Republic might be terminated without bloodshed. Hope is no longer possible. It has been quenched, and deliberately quenched, by the wanton action of the Government at Pretoria. Not even the most ardent critics at home or abroad of British policy can misconstrue the despatch of Mr. Reitz or hesitate as to what the reply of England must be to such a challenge. Addressed to us by the mightiest of sovereign international States, it must have led immediately to war. It is flung down to us by a petty Republic to which, as all Englishmen hold, we stand in the relation of a paramount Power. In tone and in substance alike the document is one of studied and insolent defiance. The men who drafted it and sanctioned it, bent upon deciding their quarrel with us by the sword, and who were not to be deterred by the prospect of a more insolent demand on England than these. Assuredly this state of things is intolerable, and Englishmen of all parties and of all shades of feeling will be unanimous that it shall be ended. They will agree, too, from henceforth that it can be ended but in one way.

On all sides, the Times correspondent in Berlin is assured that the sympathies of the German public as a whole are with the Boers, and against Great Britain. No English resident of long standing in Berlin ever expected to hear anything else. Where British interests are imperilled, continues the writer, the German Press, including lately even the organs of the Radicals, takes sides against us, and all hands there were to Schadenfreude if we were to suffer disaster or damage. Schadenfreude is a German word for which no synonym exists in any other language; it may be paraphrased as meaning "rejoicing at the hurt of another."

The Franco-Russian Alliance.

The presence of Count Mouravieff in Paris on Oct. 8th has in some quarters been regarded as an incident of a certain political significance. "Whilst" discussing it at great length in the Figaro admits that the Russian Foreign Minister comes almost disguised as a tourist, having started at Marienbad, and since then spent some time at Biarritz, but he says in the course of free conversation a good deal more work is sometimes done than in official negotiations. Commenting upon the Franco-Russian Alliance and the Military Convention, which, according to General Mercier's statement at Rennes, completes it, "Whilst" declares that the alliance was never closer or more intimate than it has been during the present year, and he is glad to be able to state that the internal troubles of the country have in no way affected it. Count Mouravieff will, therefore be treated in Paris as a friend of the first degree.

The Times correspondent at Vienna, however states that, in the informal diplomatic circles there, not the slightest credence is attached to the sensational rumours current last week as to Count Mouravieff's visit to Paris.

Naval Movements.

With regard to the reported naval movements at home, nothing whatever was known at the office of the Commander-in-Chief Portsmouth, on October 13th, respecting the statement that the transports conveying troops to South Africa were to be escorted by war ships. No orders had been received to commission ships at Portsmouth, although it should be decided to send the transports out under convoy no doubt cruisers would be temporarily withdrawn from the Channel Fleet, which was in British waters. There are, however, several large vessels in Portsmouth reserves that could be commissioned at a moment's notice, including the Europa, a first-class cruiser, of 1,000 tons, which carries twelve six-inch guns mounted in armoured casemates, besides smaller weapons. Her complement would be between six and seven hundred men. The first-class cruiser St. George, and the second-class cruiser Gladstone, besides the Fris, Latona, and one or two others, are also available. There are about 4,000 men attached to the Portsmouth Naval Depot, so that not the least difficulty would be experienced in finding crews for these ships. On the 13th instant the new battleship Canopus was ordered to be ready for sea by November 15th, in time of December 15th. She is to be commissioned by Captain Fawkes for the Mediterranean.

ON THE EVE OF WAR.

POLITICAL SPEECHES.

War with Boers had only just broken out when the mail left, but the following speeches show the temper of our politicians as the culmination of the crisis approached.

Mr. Balfour.

Mr. Balfour, addressing a meeting at Haddington on 11th ult., referred to the Boer Ultimatum, and said that peace had been wantonly and gratuitously imperilled by the rash policy of the Transvaal Government. Alluding to the change in public feeling regarding the South African difficulty, he observed that the more people became acquainted with what had been done, the more they were convinced that if the Government had erred at all it had done so on the side of patience, and that so far from having provoked an unnecessary war, they had hoped, with a firm hope, that this great controversy might have been decided without bloodshed. The war which was now imminent had been forced upon the Government, not by men fighting for the freedom of their country but by an oligarchy fearing the hour of their domination was nearing its end, and whatever sacrifices they might have to make before the war was brought to a successful issue, the Government were conscious that they were sacrifices in the interest of the rights of men and of civilization.

Lord James.

Lord James, addressing a meeting at Aberdeen on 10th ult., and dealing with the Transvaal Question, said those who had anxiously borne the responsibility of considering the events of the last few months firmly and earnestly believed that, when the real truth of these transactions became known, the course that had been pursued by the Government must and would receive the approbation of all loyal citizens. Every member of the Cabinet had been equally anxious to avert war and to maintain peace. But the news which had been received that day precipitated war, and rendered it certain.

Mr. Brodrick.

Mr. Brodrick, Under-Secretary for Foreign Affairs, at Dundee, on 11th ult., said if the transmission of telegrams was to be exchanged for the rattle of musketry, the blame did not lie with us. Nothing had been wanting on our part in the way of patience and moderation, and to the Boer Ultimatum there was but one answer, which has been given, that we could not enter into a discussion of such terms.

Mr. Asquith.

Mr. Asquith, speaking at a great meeting of Liberals at Dundee, on 11th ult., said whatever his views as to the acts of Her Majesty's Government, he had always credited them with a sincere and honest desire to avoid war. It seemed almost incredible that the Transvaal Government should have forfeited that feeling of sympathy which was always exhibited in a dispute between the weak and the strong, and should have struck the first blow in a conflict which for them could have but one result. The issue now was simply this—had Great Britain, the Paramount Power in South Africa, the right to secure for her subjects in the Transvaal the same equality of treatment as was voluntarily granted to Dutch and English alike in every other part of South Africa? That was what the people of this country could not shut their eyes to. To-day, however, he can speak without touching politics, for a situation has been created beyond party politics. He thinks that in a survey of the past three years, there is much in the relations of our Government with that of the Transvaal to criticize, if not to condemn. But that is all over for the present, for an ultimatum has been addressed to Great Britain by the South African Republic which is in itself a declaration of war. In face of this attack, the nation, he doubts not, will close its ranks and relegate party controversy to a more convenient season. Lord Roseberry adds that, without attempting to judge the policy which concluded peace, after the reverse of Majuba Hill, he is bound to state his profound conviction that there is no conceivable Government in this country which would repeat it.

Lord Roseberry.

Lord Roseberry, in reply to a correspondent who had complained of his silence in regard to the South African difficulty, says he is silent because he is loth to re-enter the field of politics. Last year he intervened in a matter for which he had much responsibility, but now the case is different. To-day, however, he can speak without touching politics, for a situation has been created beyond party politics. He thinks that in a survey of the past three years, there is much in the relations of our Government with that of the Transvaal to criticize, if not to condemn. But that is all over for the present, for an ultimatum has been addressed to Great Britain by the South African Republic which is in itself a declaration of war. In face of this attack, the nation, he doubts not, will close its ranks and relegate party controversy to a more convenient season. Lord Roseberry adds that, without attempting to judge the policy which concluded peace, after the reverse of Majuba Hill, he is bound to state his profound conviction that there is no conceivable Government in this country which would repeat it.

THE CHINESE REFORMER.
DECEIVED.

A peculiar explanation is given of the arrival by the Empress of India of Mr. Kung Yu-wei, the Chinese reformer. It is stated that he has been deceived by assassins who wired him that his mother was dangerously ill at Hongkong. The trick was discovered before he reached Yokohama and he applied to the Japanese Government to be allowed to land at Yokohama to catch the first steamer for Hawaii, but he was refused as already reported, and had to proceed to Hongkong. He arrived at Kobe on Wednesday afternoon, but no one was allowed to see him. He was under the strict protection of the captain of the Empress of India. Mr. So, Chief of the Ken Police Bureau, boarded the steamer on her arrival and conveyed instructions from Tokio to Kang, prohibiting him from landing at Kobe. Canton residents in this city only knew of his arrival in this country through the newspapers and they are surprised at his sudden re-appearance.—Kobe Herald.

ADMIRAL DEWEY'S TRIUMPH IN NEW YORK.

American exchanges received by the speedy Frisco liner America yesterday are full of graphic accounts of the welcome accorded Admiral Dewey in New York city. Referring to the magnificent triumph the New York Press of 1st October says:—

No returning Caesar, flushed with victory, ever was greeted by such a gathering as welcomed Dewey. No Caesar ever saw a sight so equal to him. While millions saw Dewey, caught a glimpse of the man and saw the sailors and soldiers, the sight they witnessed was not to be compared to what the Admiral saw. The man looking at the parade saw perhaps forty thousand troops, all told, pass in review. Dewey saw nearly one hundred times that number of persons. He saw them cheering, wild and hysterical with excitement. For three hours he passed through a lane the either side of which were a mass of humanity. Left to himself they would have swept to his carriage, carried away the horses and dragged him to the end of the line of march. Men who had waited for hours for a sight of him struggled with police to make their way to the carriage and shake his hand. Some few succeeded. Women, young and old, kissed their hands to him, threw flowers at him and then, giving way to their joyful emotions, wept.

"But the touching and certainly the most interesting incident of the day in the triumphal march down Fifth Avenue, was when the Admiral's carriage came abreast of the Waldorf-Astoria and halted between the massive Corinthian columns that George C. Boldt has erected to add to the honors bestowed by the municipality. In the State apartments of the great hotel, facing on Fifth Avenue and Thirty-third street, were gathered Admiral Dewey's relatives and nearest friends. Charles Dewey, his brother, and Mrs. Charles Dewey, Edward Wilkins Dewey, his nephew, and Mrs. Edward Wilkins Dewey, his wife, and Mrs. Stryker of Philadelphia, Mrs. J. W. Hornor and her sons, John W. Hornor, Jr., and Townsend Hornor, Daniel Griggs, son of the Attorney General, Thomas T. Keller of the State Department, Washington, and Dr. Edward Bedloe, United States Consul at Canton, China, were at the windows facing the grandstand erected on the Fifth Avenue side of the hotel, when the approach of the head of the column was announced. Charles Dewey, who possesses the same calm, democratic temperament as his distinguished brother, stepped into the first box outside the window at Thirty-third street. Dr. Bedloe and Mr. Keller followed, and at the same time the members of the Dewey family grouped themselves in the boxes which had been arranged especially for their convenience by direction of Mr. Boldt. The Admiral had been informed that his family and friends would be on the lookout for him, and he was on the lookout for them. He looked up as the Admiral's carriage stopped. Dr. Bedloe threw out an American flag, a yacht club flag, which the Admiral immediately recognized, with its thirteen stars surrounding an anchor, and the crowd realized instantly the recognition, for there was a moment's pause and then a mighty outburst of applause. "Well," said Mr. Dewey to Dr. Bedloe, as they went inside, "this is certainly a glorious day for such an occasion. The Lord has been kind to us."

"But it was the battalion of officers from the Olympia which followed that received the great applause. "Those are the boys that did the trick at Manila," yelled a gray-bearded man as the Olympia's tars proudly swung along. The members of the crowd took up the shout, and from the way they yelled it seemed there would be no noise left for Admiral Dewey and those who came behind. "Old Purdy," the oldest man in the navy, who belongs to the Olympia's crew, was recognized easily by the crowds along the Drive. He trudged along sturdily with his shipmates, smiling and happy as a boy. "Hello, Purdy," he yelled. "You didn't wait till the third of May to lick the Spaniards, did you?" "Old Purdy" shook his head and grinned while he marched on. Purdy was a seaman who was afraid the fight at Manila would not be started before May 3. He had been in a fight where he shared defeat on that date once, so he begged Admiral Dewey to get the battle over before that date.

"And while the cheers for the Olympia's tars still were ringing all along the line, a greater and mightier volume of sound came from the upper end of the Drive. Countless handkerchiefs fluttered in the breeze, hats left heads, and all the multitude that had sat rose with one accord.

It was Dewey. There he was at last! The one man of all whom the crowds had come to see, the magnet which had drawn the people from all the corners of the continent. With his hand at his chest, in constant salute, the eyes of the Admiral filled with unshed tears of happiness. And so it was for all the naval chiefs as they rolled along. Schley's famous words, "There is glory enough for us all," never seemed more appropriate. Howison was cheered, and so was Sampson, who rode with bare head. He was recognized easily and the applause for him was unstinted.

But because Rear Admiral Schley, with his old mate, Rear Admiral Miller, was far back in the line of carriages, did not keep the crowds from breaking loose when he came in sight. The Rear Admiral was cheered almost as much as Admiral Dewey himself. There was another touching scene when Admiral Dewey's carriage approached the Seventy-second street stand, where the school children were seated. In their childish, treble the youngsters started to sing. "See, the Conquering Hero Comes!" beating time with their flags.

PIRACY IN THE NEW HEBRIDES.

Victoria, B. C., October 11th. According to advices received in letters which have reached here from the New Hebrides, two men-of-war—one British and one French—acting in concert, have been suppressing bands of brigands which have been robbing and looting the native villages, and in many cases the stores of the traders in the Southern Pacific archipelago.

A landing party, composed of men from either vessel pursued the pirates from point to point until they made a last stand at the top of a small tableland, where they had thrown up earthenworks and constructed a fort. This stand was of brief duration, for after firing a few desultory shots they took to the jungle. Their camp was burned.

At Secou a band of escaped convicts from the French prison at New Caledonia, who, since they escaped in a stolen schooner five months ago, had been robbing and raiding, were annihilated and their camp destroyed. They were slain to a man by the men-of-war. Their number was not learned, but it is said to have been about twelve or fifteen.

On one island was a camp of "beachcombers" and white sailors of different nationalities, the refuse of the various ports in the Southern Seas. These men had carried away a number of native women from one of the island villages. In revenge the natives seized a number of missionaries, seven in all, five Catholics and two Protestants. The majority of the missionaries were easily captured, but one made a vigorous fight and shot one of the natives. Preparations had been made for the killing and eating of the missionaries when the warships opportunely arrived and rescued them.
